

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

BORIS FEINER is one of the new generation of highly gifted Israeli pianists who has already distinguished himself not only in his own country but in a series of international competitions. I heard him first when he won the Senigallia International Piano Competition, since when he also became a prizewinner at the Monza Competition.

I have heard him play on several occasions and rate him as a potentially important artist with great sensitivity as well as musical appreciation and ideas. He brings to his playing a freshness and approach which are compelling and refreshing. I have no hesitation in recommending him for even the most prestigious Competition, in the knowledge that he will acquit himself with distinction.
